Overall Reactions to the Paper

The CLAT PG 2025 Question Paper had 24 passages with 120 questions.

The paper maintained a balance between factual knowledge and analytical skills. There was a significant emphasis on recent legal developments and landmark judgments. Overall, the paper can be termed to be moderate in terms of difficulty level and a bit lengthy in terms of the length of the passage.

CLAT PG 2025 was moderate compared to 2024 but slightly less challenging than 2023. The inclusion of contemporary issues and direct questions balanced the difficulty level. While individual questions were not particularly tricky, completing the exam within the stipulated time required swift comprehension and decision-making skills.

Key Highlights of CLAT PG 2025

- A noticeable increase in questions on minor laws and commercial laws (like SEBI regulations).
- Only few questions from newly introduced criminal laws, unlike previous years, where criminal law held significant weight. More number of questions on Environmental Law as opposed to previous year question papers.
- Direct and straightforward questions on Torts simplified this section for most candidates.
- A focus on cases from 2022 and 2023, emphasizing the importance of staying updated with recent judgments.
- Older case laws were given much less prominence this year, marking a shift toward testing contemporary legal knowledge.
- SEBI-related questions indicated the increasing relevance of regulatory and corporate laws, reflecting a trend toward practical legal applications.
- Questions from criminal law section were simple and straightforward, requiring basic conceptual understanding rather than analytical reasoning. Barely a few questions were asked from the new criminal laws.
- The passage-based format, while central to the paper's structure, did not strictly tie questions to their corresponding passages. Many questions could be answered independently of the passage content, allowing students to save time if they were already familiar with the underlying concepts.

Comparison with Previous Years Papers of CLAT PG

- The paper introduced a balanced mix of traditional and contemporary topics but leaned more toward regulatory and commercial legal principles than core Constitutional or Criminal Law.
- Structure and Format: Retained the 2024 structure: 24 passages with 5 multiple-choice questions each (total: 120 questions).

- Changes in Complexity: Passages were more nuanced and layered, requiring deeper legal reasoning.
- Adjustments in Subject Weightage
  - Reduced focus on Contract Law and Personal Law, continuing the trend from 2024.
  - Increased emphasis on Environmental Law, reflecting global and domestic developments.
- The focus on recent judgments aligns with a trend in CLAT PG exams toward testing applicants' awareness of evolving legal landscapes.
