The first choice of any law aspirant interested in pursuing L.L.M. in India are top NLUs and CLAT PG is the only exam through which one can take admission to these colleges.

CLAT PG, with its evolving patterns, has adopted a comprehension-based format. Excerpts including legal information (with some omissions and clues) are stated, followed by a set of questions from the preceding excerpt or passage. After analyzing question papers from CLAT 2020 until now, I have come up with certain strategies that can be implemented at the last minute to ace the exam.

Of course, nothing can replace consistent studies through years of law school, especially considering this exam tests your legal analytical skills more than anything else. However, it is not impossible to crack the exam with 40 days of consistent preparation by following these tips.

- TIP 1- Make a list of landmark judgments for at least the past year.

Try to make a list month-wise by listing the case name, Bench, and ratio decidendi of the case. Dissenting opinion, if any, must be noted. Cases with constitutional significance must be stressed upon. If time permits, try to go back to the previous year as well, i.e., 2021.
