LSAT 2022 Results Declared: All details here!

LSAT 2022 results are out!

The 2022 results for LSAT India (the January exam) have been declared on the 1st February, 2022. The result is released in the form of a scorecard accessible on the LSAC India Website.

The scorecard is released with details that include your scaled score, score band, and All-India percentile score. The May session of the LSAT exam is to be conducted on the 9th of May 2022. It would be held in an online proctored mode.

If you haven't registered for the May session you can do so currently. Registrations for the May session will close on the 25th of April

HOW IS YOUR LSAT 2022 RESULT SCORE CALCULATED?

An aggregate or a raw score obtained by you, will be scaled between a score band of 420 and 480. Based on this score, your score will be compared to that of other candidate's, the total number of candidates as well as the number of candidates scoring lesser marks than you.

LET'S DISCUSS SCORES!

The LSAT exam is scored on a scaled score between 420-480. Right beside your scaled score you would be able to view your percentile. This is an indication of your score with regards to the other applicants.

Although LSAC does not conduct a counselling process for its qualified candidates, they share the score with affiliated colleges in the likes of O.P Jindal Global Law School, Bennet University, SRM University and Amity Law College among others.

These colleges in turn prepare list of students who've cleared the exam based on their LSAT India scores. If you've got a great percentile, be prepared to receive e-mails from your colleges soon!

P.S. Do make sure to download and save your scorecard considering that you may be required to submit the same during your Admissions into colleges you've applied to.
