Corroborative evidence can be defined as additional evidence that supports the testimony of a witness or strengthens an existing piece of evidence. It is governed by Section 157 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, while Section 133 of the Act deals with the testimony of an accomplice. Indian law does not mandate corroboration, but it is considered a rule of prudence.

In the case of Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan, it was held that corroboration is a rule of practice and not a rule of law. Corroborative evidence must be independent, material, and connected to the accused. It can be either direct or circumstantial in nature. Corroboration enhances the reliability and credibility of evidence, thereby ensuring that justice is not based solely on solitary and unreliable testimony.
