Before we begin...

- Before we move on to discussing the study plan for CLAT 2024, let's take a look at various sections of the examination.
- CLAT tests aspirants based on 5 sections- English, Logical Reasoning, Legal Reasoning, Quantitative Techniques and Current Affairs including GK Edit SubjectQuestions English30 Quantitative Techniques15 Logical Reasoning30 Legal Reasoning40 Current Affairs35
- Take a look at these sections and do a personal assessment. Are you someone who needs to put in extra efforts for one or two sections more than the other sections? Go through the syllabus for CLAT 2024 and figure out which areas you're absolutely new to and jot it down.
- The idea here is to dedicate more time to areas you're either new to or are weaker in since we have almost 11 months before you take the examination.
- Go through previous year papers, weightage given to various subjects and try to attempt a couple of questions.

- Before you start your preparation, keep in mind that you'll have to revise regularly. With that thought in mind, choose a limited number of resources.

Other than this, CLATalogue also has various series of posts on Contract Law, Law of Tort etc. to help you prepare for the Legal Reasoning Section.

Study Plan for CLAT 2024

What does a full one year preparation strategy look like for an ideal candidate? Remember, a study plan has to be inclusive of all subjects while giving more focus on areas you're weaker in. It has to be sustainable in the long run and flexible enough for the aspirant to be able to prepare for both CLAT and board exams at the same time.

Section		Duration
Current Affairs		45 mins
English		30 mins
Quantitative Techniques		30 mins
Logical Reasoning		30 mins
Legal Reasoning		45 mins

Once you're done with a topic or need to practice, go through sample questions for subjects like English, Logical Reasoning and Legal Reasoning etc. to get an edge over other aspirants.

After a couple of months, say around the 4th or 5th month, you can start practicing for CLAT 2024 with our free mocks and then analyze your preparation and subsequently work more on areas where you're lacking.

Important Points to remember while preparing for CLAT 2024

- There is an increased emphasis on reading-comprehension speed. Read newspapers everyday to stay in touch with new events as well as improve your reading speed.
- To improve your inference and analysis skills, try to test yourself everyday.
- Go through editorials and ponder over the opinions presented in each article.
- Legal Reasoning can be solved by conceptual clarity about basic provisions of law. Try to read more about laws in news.
- Do not be exhilarated or dejected by your mock scores. Keep your calm in all scenarios and work towards your goals!
